Minister Thurston will not leave on the Australia except the Councils raise his salary before Saturday.

The party of ladies who has been spending the summer at Mana will return to town by the next Kinau.

Among the passengers by the Kinau were Samuel Parker, C. A. Spreckels, A. S. Hoffacker, Father Leonore, Ch. Williams, Ch. Maguire and W. H. Daniels.

The ball given last night at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Irwin was a most enjoyable affair. —The residence of the host at Waikiki was most beautifully decorated and Honolulu "society" was around.

The band gave a fine concert at Thomas Square last night. The beautiful moonlight and cool weather tempted a number of people to attend.

Mr. G. F. Stoneman will remain in Honolulu for some weeks preparatory to embarking for Johannesburg, South Africa. He will await advices from Judge Bronson who leaves on the Australia.

A number of school boys will take passage on the Australia and probably return in a year as fall-fledged judges and lawyers. that is, if they don't come "after the republic is over."

UNREQUITED LOVE.

A Demented Lover's Desperate Deed.

The tale has already been told in all of the newspapers of this city of escapes from the Insane Asylum at Palama and the recapture and return of all but one of the escapees to the institution. Yesterday afternoon Mr. A. F. Raude, a late arrival in this city, who has ambition to become a member of the Sharpshooters' corps, was in the vicinity of the old cattle wharf in the harbor engaged in rifle practice. Immediately after the discharge of his last shot he heard a piteous cry of mingled terror and help proceeding from the wharf, which was within his line of fire, and fears of an injury to some one from a split bullet caused him to investigate the surroundings. Arriving at the wharf, he found a man struggling in the water. Rendering necessary assistance the almost drowned human was at last laid upon the wharf and by means of vigorous and well-directed efforts was soon enabled to exercise his faculties. While the man was recovering wind and strength his rescuer noticed that blood was oozing from a wound in the head of the rescued, a fragment of a rope encircled his neck and the lower portion of one of the legs of the overalls, which encompassed the limp limbs, was burned, the smell of kerosene being very noticeable. Recovering speech and in answer to a natural inquiry of how such things could be, the delapidated specimen told in half maudlin manners and in brief, the following story. He said that; he was of French extraction, had lived here for years but having had means was but little known as he was not forced to make acquaintances. In an inauspicious moment he became acquainted with a young lady whose domicile is within the shadow of the Central Union. He lavished his heart's treasures with an unstinting hand but, alas, the usual tale, a more wealthy wower and his love east aside. There followed the idea of self-destruction and to assure a successful shuffling off he had procured a pistol, rope, laudanum and kerosene all of which articles were to play their part in the consummation of his wish for a long last sleep. He had walked from Iwilei that morning through the shallow water to the cattle wharf, but had been compelled, by the presence of a boat's crew of American man-of-wats men, to delay his preparations. They gone, he had affixed the rope to one of the beams of the cattle guard the noose around his neck, saturated his overalls with the oil drank the laudanum and placing the pistol to his head had fired. But here a directing Providence intervened and the bullet glanced on the skull and severed the rope causing the would-be suicide to fall into the water thus extinguishing the burning clothing which had been ignited. The sudden bath made life again worthy living and a struggle with that end in view was commenced the despondent lover however having a heavy handicap in his lack of knowledge of swimming. His struggles however had the effect of making him swallow many mouthfuls of the detestable water of the bay which caused a revulsion of the stomach, relieving it of much of the laudanum. A last effort in which his despairing cries were heard and answered closed the wretched man's tale, and he walked landward through the shallow water which lies between the wharf and Iwilei. The rescuer, after the departure of his companion, in a casual look about the ground discovered a memorandum book evidently the property of the stranger and on one leaf of which was written in a clear, legible hand, the following note:

"Miss — That a heart such as yours will feel pity for anyone is not believed by me. How you have smiled at me when you knew your smile was torture and your lost love death to me. And, so it has become, for the hand that once clasped yours and now writes these lines will soon be still, in death. When Friday's moon rises with its darkened disk think then that it is the shadow of your great sin which clouds its bright face and which sent to an unknown grave one who loved you."

N. E. LOTSMAN. Palama, Oahu, Sept. 12, 1894.
